'Tell Your Boss': Recording Is Seen to Link Saudi Crown Prince More Strongly to Khashoggi Killing
By Julian E. Barnes, Eric Schmitt and David D. Kirkpatrick
Nov. 12, 2018
<https://www.nytimes.com/2018/11/12/world/middleeast/jamal-khashoggi-killing-saudi-arabia.html>

WASHINGTON — Shortly after the journalist Jamal Khashoggi was killed last month at the Saudi Consulate in Istanbul, a member of the kill team instructed a superior over the phone to “tell your boss,” believed to be Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman, that the operatives had carried out their mission, according to three people familiar with a recording of Mr. Khashoggi’s killing collected by Turkish intelligence.

The recording, shared last month with the C.I.A. director, Gina Haspel, is seen by intelligence officials as some of the strongest evidence linking Prince Mohammed to the killing of Mr. Khashoggi, a Virginia resident and Washington Post columnist whose death prompted an international outcry.

While the prince was not mentioned by name, American intelligence officials believe “your boss” was a reference to Prince Mohammed. Maher Abdulaziz Mutreb, one of 15 Saudis dispatched to Istanbul to confront Mr. Khashoggi, made the phone call and spoke in Arabic, the people said.

Turkish intelligence officers have told American officials they believe that Mr. Mutreb, a security officer who frequently traveled with Prince Mohammed, was speaking to one of the prince’s aides. While translations of the Arabic may differ, the people briefed on the call said Mr. Mutreb also said to the aide words to the effect of “the deed was done.”

“A phone call like that is about as close to a smoking gun as you are going to get,” said Bruce O. Riedel, a former C.I.A. officer now at the Brookings Institution. “It is pretty incriminating evidence.”

Turkish officials have said that the audio does not conclusively implicate Prince Mohammed, and American intelligence and other government officials have cautioned that however compelling the recording may be, it is still not irrefutable evidence of his involvement in the death of Mr. Khashoggi.

Even if Mr. Mutreb believed the killing was ordered by the crown prince, for example, he may have had an inaccurate understanding of the origins of the order. Prince Mohammed is not specifically named on the recording, and intelligence officials do not have ironclad certainty that Mr. Mutreb was referring to him.

In a statement on Monday, Saudi officials denied that the crown prince “had any knowledge whatsoever” of Mr. Khashoggi’s killing. Referring to Mr. Mutreb’s instructions to “tell your boss,” the Saudi statement said that Turkey had “allowed our intelligence services to hear recordings, and at no moment was there any reference to the mentioned phrase in the such recordings.”

The Turks may possess multiple recordings, including surveillance of telephone calls, and the Turkish authorities may have shared the audio only selectively.

A C.I.A. spokesman declined to comment.

The call was part of a recording that Turkish officials played for Ms. Haspel during her visit in October to Ankara, Turkey's capital, but they did not allow her to bring it back to the United States. On Saturday, President Recep Tayyip Erdogan of Turkey announced that his government had shared the audio with Saudi Arabia, the United States and other Western allies.

But while Turkish officials have played the recording for American and other intelligence agencies and provided transcripts, the Turks have not handed over the recording for independent analysis, according to Turkish officials.

Turkey shared evidence from the case with "a large number of friendly nations," a spokesman for Mr. Erdogan, Fahrettin Altun, said on Monday. Reacting to French criticism of Turkey's handling of the case, Mr. Altun said that the Turkish government had played an audio recording for French intelligence officials and given them transcripts.

"Let us not forget that this case would have been already covered up had it not been for Turkey's determined efforts," Mr. Altun said.

The growing evidence that Prince Mohammed was involved in the killing of Mr. Khashoggi is certain to intensify pressure on the White House, which appeared intent on relying on a lack of concrete proof of his involvement to preserve its relationship with the crown prince. Prince Mohammed has fostered a close relationship with the president's son-in-law and senior adviser, Jared Kushner, and the Trump administration has turned Saudi Arabia into Washington's most crucial Arab partner.

Some Trump advisers have argued that they would need indisputable evidence of Prince Mohammed's involvement in Mr. Khashoggi's killing before they would punish him or the kingdom more harshly. Turkish officials have said the recording contains evidence of a premeditated killing, in which Saudi agents quickly strangled Mr. Khashoggi and methodically dismembered his body with a bone saw.

The administration, according to current and former officials, is hoping that making some modest moves on sanctions and curtailing support for the Saudi war effort in Yemen will satisfy critics, including those on Capitol Hill.

But the shift in power in Congress, where Democrats take control of the House in January, is also increasing pressure on the administration to take more punitive action. The C.I.A. and other intelligence officials were set to brief Congress this week, and congressional leaders will press Ms. Haspel for her assessment of Prince Mohammed's culpability.

Mr. Trump himself has suggested more information would be coming out. "I'll have a much stronger opinion on that subject over the next week," he told reporters on Wednesday at the White House. "I am forming a very strong opinion."

Signs of a hardening stance within the administration are emerging. The State Department issued a tough statement on Sunday saying that Secretary of State Mike Pompeo had told Prince Mohammed in a phone call that "the United States will hold all of those involved in the killing of Jamal Khashoggi accountable."

Saudi officials planned to release their own inquiry in the coming days, but Turkey's revelation that they and Western officials also have the transcripts of the recordings could force the Saudis to scramble before any presentation they planned to make.

Even without definitive proof, intelligence agencies had already concluded that only Prince Mohammed could have ordered the operation to kill Mr. Khashoggi, given the personal character of his governance and the depth of his control over the kingdom. Evidence from the tape also showed that Mr. Khashoggi was killed soon after he entered the room of the Saudi Consulate in Istanbul where the security team was waiting for him, further proof that the killing was planned, according to people briefed on the intelligence.

Current and former intelligence officials insisted that it is rare that all of the pieces of a complex puzzle like Mr. Khashoggi's killing would ever be available. Intelligence, according to a former official, simply does not work like a spy thriller or television cop show where a case turns on a crystal-clear recording.

Investigators were unlikely to collect a piece of evidence that incontrovertibly links the crown prince to the killing, said Representative Adam B. Schiff, Democrat of California, who is set to lead the House Intelligence Committee next year.

"You are not going to have any of the people who carried out the murder speak openly about who they got their orders from or who is in the loop on it," Mr. Schiff said in an interview. "That is not realistic to expect."

The absence of direct evidence does not prevent the intelligence community from laying responsibility at Prince Mohammed's feet. An intelligence assessment includes an agency's best judgment on what happened based on the available facts and experience of officials.

Mr. Schiff promised that when he takes charge of the Intelligence Committee, he will investigate Mr. Khashoggi's killing and examine Saudi Arabia's actions more broadly in the Middle East, including its military campaign in Yemen, which has prompted a humanitarian crisis.

"We need to do our own due diligence, we need to make sure we are getting good intelligence, and we need to make sure the administration doesn't misrepresent to the country what foreign actors are doing," Mr. Schiff said.

Nonetheless, current and former officials said they do not expect Mr. Trump to drop his support for Prince Mohammed.

"The Trump family and the president have built up such an overwhelming reliance on the crown prince that the relationship is now, in their view, too big to fail," Mr. Schiff said.

Policymakers — not Ms. Haspel or Dan Coats, the director of national intelligence — will decide what sort of relationship to have with Prince Mohammed and what punishment Saudi Arabia should face for Mr. Khashoggi's killing, current and former officials said.

Hello,

We have also reached out to NSC and CIA, but are interested to know whether ODNI, including DNI Coats/DCIA Haspel, have, based on audio supplied by Turkey, offered any final assessment regarding a potential link (or lack thereof) between MBS and Khashoggi's killing, as recently suggested by Amb Bolton.

Would appreciate a call if possible - (b)(6)

Thanks as always

Dear Charles and team,

Greetings.

May I check the Washington Post's report, which says that US intelligence intercepted communications of Saudi officials discussing a plan to capture Jamal Khashoggi before his disappearance.

It says US intelligence discovered the Saudis wanted to lure Khashoggi back to Saudi Arabia and lay hands on him there. It says US intelligence was not clear whether the Saudis intended to arrest and interrogate Khashoggi or to kill him, or if the United States warned Khashoggi that he was a target.

Did US intelligence come across discussions to capture Khashoggi?

Did the US warn Khashoggi he was a target based on this information?

Can you help with any further comment?

Many thanks,

Katrina

Subject: Comment on Jamal Khashoggi and US intelligence

Good afternoon, all. I'm working on a story for publication today about the disappearance of Jamal Khashoggi and what the US government may have known about threats to him. The story will report, citing knowledgeable US officials, that the US had intelligence indicating that the Saudi government intended to capture Jamal Khashoggi, initially by trying to lure him back to Saudi Arabia, and that the plan to capture him was put in place by the highest levels of the Saudi government.

Is there any comment or guidance ODNI can offer on this matter?

Also, can you tell me if any component of the IC warned Khashoggi that he was in danger? I take as guidance in this case IC Directive 191 on the "duty to warn," which states, in part, "An IC element that collects or acquires credible and specific information indicating an impending threat of intentional killing, serious bodily injury, or kidnapping directed at a person or group of people (hereafter referred to as intended victim) shall have a duty to warn the intended victim or those responsible for protecting the intended victim, as appropriate."

Thanks for you help. Feel free to call me if that's easier. I'm at (b) (6)

Hi Charles,

Good to talk to you on the phone just now. Understand that you'll have no comment on the claims in last night's Post story on Jamal Khashoggi. Curious if there's anything you can share on the following:

Some former officials have been saying the IC has a responsibility under Directive 191 to warn potential victims of impending threats. Can you provide some clarity on the circumstances under which that applies? Is it only relevant to U.S. citizens and/or residents, and what degree of threat would rise to that level?

Is the IC currently involved in any U.S., Turkish and/or Saudi investigations into Khashoggi's case? In a hypothetical situation, how would agencies do so -- would the president personally make the request?

I'd appreciate if you could get back to me by noon EST.

Thanks for your time,

Akbar

Subject: ABC News Q re: Khashoggi

Hi all – Hope you're having a good Friday. Apologies if I'm doubling up on Qs from ABC, but wanted to make sure we got a few to you today ahead of the evening news. Can ODNI give any information on the record, on background for the following?

1. In reference to Washington Post reporting, have Turkish officials described audio or video recordings of what happened to Khashoggi inside the Saudi Consulate? Since that reporting, have US officials actually seen/heard the video/audio?
2. In reference to another WaPo report, can you confirm that prior IC reports showed MBS wanted to lure Khashoggi back to Saudi Arabia and detain him?
3. Has an American investigation been launched with respect to Khashoggi? Who's taking lead on that?
4. What should we make of the Apple Watch angle on this?

Thank you very much for any help. I'm available at (b)(6) (office) or (b)(6) (cell) if a phone call is easier.

Best,
Lee

Subject: Query from the Daily Beast re Rep. Castro accusation re Khashoggi/MBS

Hi Tim & Brian,

On CNN this morning, Rep. Joaquin Castro of HPSCI made an allegation about Jared Kushner that implicated US intelligence in the Khashoggi slaying. Castro said he had seen "reporting that Jared Kushner may have, with U.S. intelligence, delivered a hit list, an enemies list, to the crown prince, to MBS, in Saudi Arabia and that the prince may have acted on that, and one of the people he took action against is Mr. Khashoggi."

For the record, did U.S. intelligence ever deliver, or aid in delivering "a hit list, an enemies list" to MBS or any other Saudi official?

Thanks,
Spencer

Welcome comment/guidance on this one. Tks. Believe I had heard something along these lines a while ago. mh

WASHINGTON — Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman of Saudi Arabia authorized a secret campaign to silence dissenters — which included the surveillance, kidnapping, detention and torture of Saudi citizens — more than a year before the killing of Jamal Khashoggi, according to American officials who have read classified intelligence reports about the campaign.

At least some of the clandestine missions were carried out by members of the same team that killed and dismembered Mr. Khashoggi in Istanbul in October, suggesting that his killing was a particularly egregious part of a wider campaign to silence Saudi dissidents, according to the officials and associates of some of the Saudi victims.

Thanks for taking some time to chat Kellie. As we discussed, here is a question re Khashoggi.

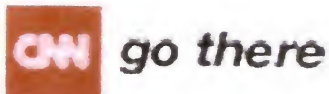

CNN has reported for months that while there is no smoking gun connecting Saudi Crown Prince MBS to the Khashoggi murder that the IC assessment indicates that the killing was likely carried out with his approval/knowledge. Has the IC's assessment related to the Saudi Crown Prince's role in the murder changed or evolved since CIA director Gina Haspel briefed lawmakers several months ago and are intel officials still evaluating information related to the killing?

Separately, I was wondering if you might be able to pass along the following question related to reporting about the President's ties to a Chinese-born massage parlor founder.

Is the IC currently assessing or aware of allegations that this massage parlor founder helped Chinese business executives attempt to buy access to the President or his campaign? Broadly speaking, what is the IC counter-intel assessment regarding China attempted to use Chinese nationals and businesses leaders to influence US politics?

UPDATE 4-Turkish, Saudi officials diverge on whereabouts of prominent Saudi journalist

- Khashoggi moved to U.S. last year fearing punishment for views
- Fiancée says has not seen him for nearly 24 hours
- Saudi crown prince has cracked down on critics of his policies

(Adds comments from Turkish and Saudi officials, fiancée, UN)

By Sarah Dadouch, Orhan Coskun and Yara Bayoumy

ISTANBUL/WASHINGTON, Oct 3 (Reuters) - Turkish and Saudi authorities gave conflicting accounts on Wednesday about the whereabouts of Saudi commentator Jamal Khashoggi, who moved to Washington last year fearing retribution for his views and has not been seen nearly 30 hours after entering the Saudi consulate in Istanbul.

Khashoggi's Turkish fiancée as well as a close friend contacted by Reuters said he had disappeared after entering the diplomatic mission on Tuesday to secure documentation of his divorce so that he could remarry. The fiancée, who asked not to be named, said she had waited outside the consulate from 1 p.m local time (1000 GMT) and called the police when he had not reappeared.

Turkish presidential spokesman Ibrahim Kalin said Khashoggi was still in the consulate and the government was monitoring the situation.

"Our relevant authorities are in contact and engaged in negotiations with their (Saudi) counterparts. I hope this issue will be resolved with ease," he told reporters.

But a Saudi official denied that Khashoggi was in the consulate.

"Mr. Khashoggi visited the consulate to request paperwork related to his marital status and exited shortly thereafter," the official said. "He is not in the consulate nor in Saudi custody."

His fiancée, who returned to the consulate on Wednesday after waiting for 12 hours the day before, repudiated that claim.

"If this was true, where is he? Where is he? If he went home, no, I went to the house and didn't find him. Where is Jamal?" she told Reuters.

Turkey has had strained relations with Saudi Arabia and other Gulf Arab states since June 2017, when Ankara stood by Qatar in a regional row. Arab states cut trade and diplomatic ties with Qatar over alleged links to terrorism, which Doha denies.

Turkey has also worked with Iran, Saudi Arabia's arch-rival in the Middle East, to try to reduce fighting in northern Syria, and Iranian and Turkish military chiefs exchanged visits last year.

When asked whether the U.S. State Department has sought information from the Saudis and the Turks, an official in Washington said on Tuesday, "We have seen these reports and are seeking more information at this time."

FAMILIAR FACE

Khashoggi, a familiar face on political talk shows on Arab satellite television networks for years, has lived in self-exile in Washington, D.C. for more than a year after he said the authorities had instructed him to stop tweeting.

As a journalist, he interviewed Al Qaeda leader Osama bin Laden several times in Afghanistan and Sudan, and served twice as editor of Al Watan newspaper.

He advised Prince Turki al-Faisal, former Saudi intelligence chief and ambassador to the United States and Britain, and has also been close to billionaire investor Prince Alwaleed bin Talal.

Over the past year, Khashoggi has written regular columns in the Washington Post criticising Saudi Arabia's policies towards Qatar and Canada, the war in Yemen, and a crackdown on dissent and the media and activists which has seen dozens of activists, intellectuals and clerics detained.

"I have left my home, my family and my job, and I am raising my voice," he wrote in September 2017. "To do otherwise would betray those who languish in prison. I can speak when so many cannot."

Ali Shihabi, head of the Arabia Foundation in Washington which regularly supports Saudi policy, expressed concern on Twitter about the reports.

"Jamal and I have not seen eye to eye on many issues but having him go missing like this is awful," he said.

Mohamad Soltan, an Egyptian-American activist who sees Khashoggi regularly in Washington, told Reuters that Khashoggi was in the United States on an O-visa, a temporary residency visa awarded to foreigners "who possess extraordinary ability" in the sciences, arts, education, and other fields and are recognised internationally, and had applied for permanent residency status.

All public protests are banned in Saudi Arabia, as are political parties. Labour unions are illegal, the media are controlled and criticism of the royal family can lead to prison.

Dozens of activists, clerics and intellectuals have been arrested in the past year in a crackdown on potential opponents of the kingdom's absolute rulers. Among them was economist Essam al-Zamil, a friend of Khashoggi's, who was charged this week with joining a terrorist organisation, meeting with foreign diplomats and inciting protests. [nL8N1WH52M]

Scores of businessmen were detained last November in Riyadh's Ritz-Carlton hotel in a separate campaign against corruption, unnerving some foreign investors. Most were released after reaching financial settlements with the authorities.

Hello media team,

Congressional officials have said the Gang of 8 is expected to be briefed by the IC on or after Nov 13 about the Khashoggi investigation and the CIA director's trip to Turkey last month.

My question for the ODNI:

Will this briefing for the Gang of 8 be by Directore Coats or Deputy Gordon or a lower level representative? Or, alternatively, because this focuses on DCIA Haspel's trip will the ODNI not be represented.
